Program in Economic and Public Policy (PEPP)
University of Tsukuba, JAPAN
Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences

1. Purpose of the Program

The Program in Economic and Public Policy (PEPP) is a master's program that offers scholarships to mid-career professionals from developing and transition countries who have had a solid university education and working experience in areas related to policy making. Using an interdisciplinary approach, the PEPP provides the scholars with the training and the necessary skills for the conception, design and implementation of development policies. It endeavors to contribute to the creation of an international community of highly trained professionals primed to grapple with the challenges of economic and social development.

2. Donors

- World Bank (WB)

Founded in 1944, the World Bank is an international financial institution that has served as a vital source of financial and technical assistance to developing countries. It consists of two institutions, the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development (IBRD) and the International Development Association (IDA). The World Bank has two goals: to end extreme poverty within a generation and to boost shared prosperity. With 188 member nations, it is a part of the World Bank Group, which is in turn a part of the United Nations (UN) system.

- Asian Development Bank (ADB)

The Asian Development Bank is a regional development financial institution founded in 1966 that seeks to improve people's lives in Asia and the Pacific. The ADB aims to make the Asia-Pacific free from poverty and to help build a world in which everyone enjoys the benefits of sustained and inclusive growth.

Past Donors (for reference)

- ❖ African Development Bank (AfDB)
- ❖ Inter-American Development Bank (IADB)
- ❖ Ministry of Finance (MOF) of the Republic of Indonesia

3. Brief History of PEPP

The PEPP started out in April, 1995 as the Program in Policy Management (PPM) under the Graduate School of International Political Economy (GSPE) of the University of Tsukuba. In accordance with an agreement between the university and the World Bank Institute (WBI), the PPM was established as a trans-disciplinary program targeting mid-career professionals from developing and transition countries. The first cohort consisted of ten young professionals from developing countries. Subsequently, recruitment was done every two years.

The program received sponsorship for scholars from developing countries through the Joint Japan/World Bank Graduate Scholarship Program (JJ/WBGSP). To be eligible, a candidate had to be midcareer (under 35 years old preferred), and to have some working experience related to the policy-making process, and/or research at public or private sector, or related institutions, particularly in an economics-related area. Scholars who completed course work and successfully defended their master's theses within two years were awarded a master's degree in International Political Economy.

After the expiration of the first agreement (which covered Cohorts 1 to 3), the university and the WBI extended the program. In the second contract (covering April 2001 ~ March 2007), three more batches (Cohorts 4 to 6) were awarded scholarships. The PPM was placed under the Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences (which took over the GSIPE). It started to accept scholars funded by the Inter-American Development Bank (IADB) and the African Development Bank (AfDB). A special extension of the second contract provided funding for Cohort 7 (April 2007 to March 2009).

With the relative success of the program, funding increased and more scholarship grants could be provided. Starting in April 2009, the program offered two course alternatives: Course in Economic Policy and Course in International Public Policy. To reflect these changes, the PPM changed its name to the Program in Economic and Public Policy Management (PEPPM). Meanwhile, the AfDB and Japan's Ministry of Finance agreed on AfDB's withdrawal from the scholarship program. However, a student from Indonesia sponsored by a project for human resource development of the country's Ministry of Finance was admitted to study in the program.

In April 2011, the IADB and Japan's Ministry of Finance agreed on IADB's withdrawal from the scholarship program. Asian scholars, however, filled the gap left by the Latin American scholars, as the Asian Development Bank (ADB) started to award scholarships to Asian professionals. In recognition of the PEPPM's outstanding contribution in helping the University of Tsukuba to internationalize and to provide high quality education, the university administration conferred the program the "University President's Prize" in 2013.

The PEPPM has adopted several changes with the entry of Cohort 11 (2015-17). It has shortened its name to "Program in Economic and Public Policy (PEPP)". The master's program has been shortened from two years to eighteen months, as other programs in the university have shown that students can actually finish the study/research load within a shorter program duration. The start of the master's program has been moved from April to October, a schedule that gibes better with school/university openings in many other countries. There will be more PEPP students as there will be a new cohort every year (instead of every two years as before). Following reorganization in the university, the PEPP, now classified as one of the Special English Programs, has been moved to the Master's Program in International Area Studies (which is still under the Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences). The Course in Economic Policy confers the degree of Master of Arts in Economics and the Course in Public Policy confers the degree of Master of Public Policy. The public policy course will be abolished and be only the economic policy course from Cohort 14.

PROGRAM OBJECTIVES

To provide, within the time frame of 18 months, training and the necessary skills for the conception, design, and implementation of development policies. Our focus is on International Development with a trans-disciplinary approach to the economic and social problems of developing and transition countries. We endeavor to contribute to the creation of an international community of highly trained professionals addressing the daily challenges of economic and social development. Participants from previous cohorts have taken up prestigious positions back in their home countries, some as policy managers, others as researchers or scholars in academic institutions. We expect, together with our sponsoring institutions, the World Bank and the Asian Development Bank, many more talented and motivated professionals to join us and to apply their newly enhanced knowledge and skills to help accelerate the pace of economic and social development in their countries.

SKILL FORMATION

We target mid-career professionals with a solid university education and working experience in areas related to policymaking. The Program is determined to maintain its well-deserved reputation, particularly in imparting a considerable amount of knowledge and skills in a relatively short span of time, and in striving to ensure that its participants are highly motivated and possess the necessary level of intellectual maturity. We also expect our students to have a clear view of the problematic of their respective countries, in particular, in the context of globalization and accelerated technological change.

CAREER PROSPECTS

The Program in Economic and Public Policy (PEPP) was established with the purpose of building strong analytical skills useful for a wide range of professionals in developing countries. The program invites those candidates who need sound knowledge of economics in making policy decisions. While a majority of the student body of the program are young professionals in the public sector in developing countries, the program also accepts students applying directly after completing their undergraduate study from any country in the world. The skills acquired through the program should prove highly valuable when applied in positions related to policy development and assessment as well as other research-oriented positions in the public sector in educational institutions.

PEPP is integrated into the curriculum of the Master's Program in International Area Studies within the Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences of the University of Tsukuba. It offers the students opportunities to develop their ability in economic and public policy analysis, while at the same time providing an environment where they can be exposed to a wide range of academic subjects in the humanities and social sciences.

Nguyen Ngoc QUYNH is a Social Protection Program Analyst at the United Nations Population Fund in Hanoi, Vietnam. She was a scholar in the 5th cohort (2003-5) of the Program.

I was admitted to the Master's Program in Policy Development in 2003. Studying in this program has changed my life and turned my career completely toward a bigger horizon. The program offers high quality education and training, ranking among the best programs in Japan. I learned a lot from this program, having chances to study and work with excellent professors in a multi-cultural environment. I think this has played an important role in my career development in an international environment after graduation. And it has been the keystone for my current work at the United Nations. Besides, the University of Tsukuba, with its broad curriculum and modern library, could provide students the opportunity to interact with various disciplines, and access to high-ranking journals and fully updated academic works. Last but not least, the beautiful, tranquil and peaceful city of Tsukuba has been a home for me and made me feel very comfortable for living and studying. Studying in this program has indeed made my life become more successful and more valuable. I would say being in this Program was one of the most remembered and valuable times of my life.

Adam Chamunorwa MUPINDA, from Zimbabwe, is a scholar in the 11th cohort (2015-17) of the Program

The credibility that a PEPP qualification affords and the skills it cultivates are certainly going to be key assets for my future career development and will give me an urge to become an economic change agent for my country and the region at large. Understanding the political economy at an international level and the social thought process, which is one of the thrusts of the PEPP program, is a major asset. The PEPP program curriculum is well designed and well acclaimed by alumni. It is an honour to be a World Bank Scholar in this program with so many distinguished professors. With the benevolence of the World Bank and the Japanese government, I also got the opportunity to be part of a study trip to Okinawa and of an invaluable "homestay" with a Japanese family, which served as an eye opener into the Japanese culture. The Japanese lessons in a friendly atmosphere were also invaluable. I sincerely hope more and more aspiring colleagues from developing countries will find their way to the University of Tsukuba and avail of this opportunity of a lifetime.

RS AND ALUMNI

Och DANGAASUREN, from Mongolia, is a scholar in the 11th cohort (2015-17) of the Program.

I was very fortunate to achieve one of my lifetime goals – pursuing graduate studies here at the University of Tsukuba as a scholar of the PEPP program funded by the Asian Development Bank. I love the environment of Tsukuba, especially around the University, which is quiet, peaceful, and beautiful. As a PEPP scholar, you will gain vast new knowledge and experience through regular and intensive courses. You will hear from the professors with a lot of expertise in their research fields. Working with these professors provides you with a great opportunity to enhance your theoretical, empirical and cultural understandings. Apart from the course work, you will experience domestic study trips which will enhance your empirical skills. Also, you will meet students from all over the world, make friends, and learn from them. Sharing experiences with other students has been among my most memorable moments. The PEPP scholarship will be one of your best opportunities to obtain a graduate degree here in Japan and I urge you not to miss this great opportunity.

Reshmi KUMARI, from Fiji, was a scholar in the 10th cohort (2013-15) of the Program.

I am a proud Economics scholar of PEPPM at Tsukuba University. I entered this Program through the Asian Development Bank funded Japan Scholarship Program. The core thing about this program is that it offers both International Public Policy and Economics courses taught by prominent Professors. This is one of the top Universities in Japan located in the beautiful City of Tsukuba about 45 minutes by train from Tokyo. There are opportunities to explore many social activities, enjoy the beautiful environment and experience the culture of Japan apart from studying. Being a student in this Program gives you a new view and a new perspective to advance your career by encouraging new ideas through collaborative discussions in classrooms, presentations in Seminars and educational trips. I highly recommend applying and taking advantage of this awesome opportunity and benefit from a network of students from many countries around the world.

THE CITY OF TSUKUBA

Tsukuba Science City, where the University of Tsukuba is located, offers rich physical and human resources in a combination that is rare elsewhere in Japan. The city and its surrounding area abound with natural beauty, with Lake Kasumigaura to the east and Mount Tsukuba to the north. More than 200 government and private research institutes dot the city, which was planned under government supervision and designed as a comprehensive research and housing complex. With an estimated population of 200 thousand, Tsukuba is located 60 km northeast of Tokyo and 40 km northwest of the New Tokyo International Airport in Narita. The silent beauty of the Pacific Ocean beaches is about 40 km away, and the nearest majestic peaks of the Japanese Alps are no farther than 120 km. The trip to Tsukuba from Tokyo, by train, takes just 45 minutes. Direct regular bus services link Tsukuba to Narita airport in about 70 minutes, to Haneda airport in about 120 minutes, to Tokyo station in about 75 minutes.

THE TSUKUBA CONCEPT

The University of Tsukuba was established in Tsukuba Science City in October 1973 as the first comprehensive university set up under Japan's country-wide university reform plan. The University promotes scientific research and cultural exchange, and aims to develop scholars with creative minds, and a deep regard for people and our planet. It strives to create a unique, vibrant and internationally competitive university that offers superior education and research facilities, and graduates people capable of dealing sensitively with our era of change. Under a new administration guided by the "New Systems for Education and Research," the University features a cosmopolitan spirit of openness. This is reflected in our diversity, which counts more than 2,300 international students among a total student population of 16,000. This has resulted in our being ranked by the Times Higher Education World University Rankings 2015-2016 as No.1 in Japan in international outlook.

THE CURRICULUM

PEPP is designed to train professionals who will devote themselves to positions or endeavors related to the economic and social development of their respective countries and regions. These positions may include policy-making in government and other related institutions, as well as research, teaching and training positions in academic and educational institutions. We expect program graduates to assume leading development roles.

The program approaches public policy, and economic and social issues principally through the economics discipline. In accordance with the stated objective of the program, the curriculum is designed to provide advanced academic and research skills in economics. Students in the program are required to complete 30 credits from the list of subjects offered by the program which includes a number of compulsory subjects. Students, however, will also be able to choose elective subjects from inside and outside of the PEPP listing, to the extent that is allowed by the rules of the Graduate School.

In addition, students are required to write a Master's thesis in their last semester. Each student will have a committee of academic advisors, who will supervise their thesis work and provide counsel on their academic endeavors. Students are encouraged to consult with their academic advisors often. The program faculty members mostly specialize in economics, but with a wide range of research interests. Beyond the PEPP program, the Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences is comprised of a large faculty body specialized in various disciplines, such as economics, political science, international relations, history, sociology and anthropology, among others. The Graduate School emphasizes high-quality academic advisory, encouraging faculty members to make themselves available for students as often as possible.

An academic year at the University of Tsukuba is organized in two semesters: the fall semester from October to March, and the spring semester from April to September. (See the flowchart.) Courses are normally offered for a duration of ten weeks or 15 weeks, with the exception of some intensive courses lasting for a shorter period. Most courses meet once or twice a week, with sessions of 75 minutes each.
